MAKEMUSIC RELEASES FREE FINALE SONGBOOK IPAD MUSIC APP

New iPad app lets musicians carry thousands of pages of sheet music—and hear the music play

Minneapolis – June 4, 2012 – MakeMusic, Inc. (NASDAQ: MMUS) today announced the release of Finale SongBook™, a free music app that enables iPad users to view, play and print electronic sheet music. SongBook leverages MakeMusic’s vast music notation expertise into the world of mobile applications.

Viewing music on an iPad empowers musicians to bring thousands of pieces of music to any practice, rehearsal, or performance. SongBook’s elegant, uncluttered interface is optimized for performance, leveraging all available real estate for music.

“Finale SongBook extends Finale’s dominance from the desktop to the mobile world,” said Karen van Lith, MakeMusic CEO. “It establishes a mobile platform on which we will build future products. Upcoming releases will expand MakeMusic’s revenue stream by offering additional features and premium content on a pay-per-title basis. With Finale SongBook as a foundation, MakeMusic is uniquely positioned to provide the most complete user experience for mobile musicians.”

In addition to viewing .PDF music files, SongBook is the only iPad app that directly supports files created by MakeMusic’s industry standard Finale family of music notation software. With these files Finale SongBook takes the iPad music experience to the next level by adding a “Play” button, allowing users to hear as well as see the music.

Finale SongBook is available as a free download from the iTunes music store.
